

INDIGENOUS EDUCATION RESEARCH CONFERENCE

It is a pleasure to invite you to the 3rd Annual Indigenous Education Research Conference. The conference is organized by the Native Faculty in the College of Education at the University of New Mexico and will take place in Albuquerque, New Mexico on April 26th, 2018.

The theme of the Indigenous Education Research Conference is:

“COMMUNITY AS INDIGENOUS PEDAGOGY”

When and where is the conference?

Date: April 26, 2018

Location: University of New Mexico Campus, Albuquerque, NM in the Zimmerman Library Willard Room (enter Zimmerman Library through the north doors)

Who should attend?

Indigenous youth, educators, scholars, community members, and allies

What topics will be covered?

The conference will focus on the social, cultural, political, geopolitical, and economic contexts in which Indigenous Peoples engage in education.

What are the registration details?

Registration is free and will be done on-site. Please, go directly to the Willard Room to get registered for the event.

Where can I get more information?

Website: <http://coe.unm.edu/departments-programs/teelp/ier-conference/>

Email: ierc@unm.edu

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/IndigenousEdResearchConf/>

---

Conference Background

The inaugural Indigenous Education Research Conference began in 2016. It originates from a course developed by Dr. Glenabah Martinez in the mid- 1990s for UNM's Native American Studies curriculum. Similar to the course, the longstanding goal of the conference will focus on the social, cultural, political, geopolitical, and economic contexts in which Indigenous Peoples engage in education. We invite all to partake in thought provoking panels, papers, and posters that interrogate power as both a proactive and reactive element in sites where Indigenous Peoples engage in education.