BLACK STUDIES AS COMMUNITY COMMITMENT: THE RADICAL PATH FORWARD DESPITE CHALLENGING TIMES

David Omotoso Stovall, Ph.D.

Professor of Educational Policy Studies and African-American Studies at The University of Illinois at Chicago

The presentation seeks to engage one of the original visions of Black Studies departments in relationship to authentic community engagement. As many Black Studies departments envisioned themselves to be sites of affirmation and critical inquiry, one of the most critical components of this movement is centered in community change. Returning to this idea, the presentation seeks to present critical questions beyond the singular project of academic inquiry, challenging current and emerging Black Studies departments to continue to operate as reflections of the communities they were intended to support.

SPRING 2018 CORTEZ WILLIAMS LECTURE SERIES >
